

Lighting Up the East End to Get Out the Vote

One of the slides from "Project Vote" taken from a work by Ross Watts

Artists for Democracy

By Jennifer Landes

November 1, 2020

On Monday evening from 5 to 8, Artists for Democracy will continue their East End projections to encourage residents to vote on Tuesday, which is the official Election Day.

The "Project Vote" projections can be seen at East Hampton's Hook Mill, Southampton Village Hall and the Southampton Arts Center, VSOP Projects in Greenport, Trieber Farms in Peconic, and at the Jamesport Meeting House. There will also be projections in Bellport at Marquee Projects gallery, the Jazz Loft in Stony Brook, St. Ann's Warehouse in Brooklyn, and Taylor Rental in Great Barrington, Mass. Other locations are still under consideration with some surprise pop-ups in Riverhead, New York City, and along County Road 39 in Southampton.

Christine Sciulli, an Amagansett artist who uses light projections in her work, served as the curator of the project and has also contributed a slide. The full Artists for Democracy's "Project Vote" projection is below.

"Project Vote" is the product of a nonpartisan group of 43 contributing artists from Hawaii to Amagansett. East End artists who are participating include Tor Burwell, Rive Weiner, Bastienne Schmidt, Lindsay Morris, Laurie Lambrecht, Caterina Verde, J.J. Veronis, Alfredo Merat, Tycho Burwell, Margaret Garrett, Sylvia Hommert, Andrea Cote, Toni Ross, Yuka Silvera, Ross Watts, Philippe Cheng, Almond Zigmund, Cliff Baldwin, Saskia Friedrich, and Amy Kirwin.

This article has been updated to indicate new and finalized locations for the Project Vote projections.